

Humanities graduates are more widely distributed throughout different economic sectors than degree holders in most other fields.